MOST of the cases cured by Ayer's Sarsaparilla have been given up by the regular practice. Physicians are recommending this medicine more than ever, and with satisfactory results.

E. M. Sargent, Lowell, Mass., says:

"Several years ago, my daughter broke out with large sores on her hands, face, and other parts of her body. The case puzzled the doctors. My daughter used Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and it resulted in a complete cure. Her blood seems to have been thoroughly purified, as she has never had so much as a pimple since taking this medicine."

"This is to certify that after having been sick for twelve years with kidney disease and general debility, and having been treated by several physicians without relief, I am now better in every respect, and think I am nearly well, having taken seven bottles of Ayer's Sarsaparila."—Maria Ludwigson, Albert Les, Minn.

The Reason.

Here is the reason true and terse:

A Disagreeable Truth too Flathy Demanstrated—No Excuss for the Officer and the season have been thinking and talking of the last month came off Monday, and to-day Salivan is the undispensed champion of the world. mirers of both from their training quar-ters to New Orleans, and thence in due time to the ring. The only point in all the proceedings which those most close-ly concerned thought it safer not to divulge in advance to the world was the actual place of fight-ing; and that was really an open secret hours before the combat. The simple explanation of all this publicity is that these men did not believe the authori-ties intended to prevent the fight if they could conveniently avoid doing so, and these men did not believe the authorites intended to prevent the fight if they could conveniently avoid doing so, and the result vindicates their judgment. The truth is, however disagreeable it may be to acknowledge it, that though a strong public sentiment is theoretically opposed to prize fighting, it diminishes in intensity very fast as the hour for an important fight approaches, and is replaced, especially among men of the class upon which the practical enforcement of the laws depends, by an indisposition to interfere. Tens of thousands of law-abiding citizens, who would vote against brize fighting as often as they got the chance, will read the details of this latest encounter before they eat their breakfast this morning. These are facts, and there is no advantage in denying or concealing them simply because they are not creditable facts. What they prove, or indicate, may be a matter of dispute. Perhaps they prove that, as Mr. Lincoln once said, there is a good deal of human nature lying around loose. Men, and women too, are itensely interested in supreme displays of strength and skill and plack, and whatever conscience may have to say on the subject, when the excitement is on.

strengta and skill and pluck, and whatever conscience may have to say on the aubject, when the excitement is on, too many of them decline to discriminate between what is really fine and what is utterly ignoble. There is no doubt that a prize fight is the most brutal and demoralizing exhibition of physical provess now left in the midst of civilization. The people engaged in professional puglisam are one and all lawbreakers, and ninety-nine-hundredths of them are utterly deprayed and degraded. The second and third rate encounters which they bring about in the course of providing themselves with diversion which they bring about in the course of providing themselves with diversion and a living are regarded with little interest by the community at large, and that little leans toward indignation; but when the championship of the world is at stake, an inclination to let the fight proceed is manifested in many quarters where, except for the teaching of experience, it never would have been looked for.

These facts do not excuse the negli-These facts do not excuse the negli-leaw. The Mississippi authorities could have prevented the fight if they had been determined to do so, and in so doing they might have set an example to the whole country, the value of which would have been appreciated so soon as the inevitable reaction from a temporary excitement had set in. Many a man will feel hereafter a sense of humilation in realizing the interest which he actually took in this fight, and though a strong sentiment practically which he actually took in this fight, and though a strong sentiment practically encouraged it, an overwhelming sentiment would have supported the men who had been brave and alert enough to prevent it. As it is, the comparatively slight demoralisation inherent in a natural though unworthy curiosity to know the result becomes vastly greater and more pursuasive through the gratification of that curiosity, and will bear its own fruits in every part of the country.

AGRICULTURAL NOTES.

Wagons and carts that are used daily should have the axles well greased at least three times a week. It lessens the work of the horses.
Bulls are very treacherous. It is usually the gentic bull that injures his keepers. The older they become the more dangerous they are.

Grass growing around peach trees will do the trees more injury than any other nource of damage. The peach orchard requires thorough cultivation. The strawberry patch should be given a thorough cleaning of grass and weeds so as to allow the old plants to throw out runners and to give the runners a chance to root.

Horses should have at least two hours

The best time to use the cultivator is on warm, dry days. All weeds and grass will then be quickly killed by the sun, and will have no opportunity to take root and grow. If the ground is damp when it is cultivated the weeds and grass will not be entirely destroyed and the work may have to be done over sgain.

Sweet potato plants should now be spreading, and unless they are cultivated the task will be more difficult after the vines cover the ground. They should be hilled up in order to avoid heavy rains. It is not too late to replant the missing plants if a handful of ertilizer be scattered around the plants that may be set out.

Flies and other insects often cause the stock to lose flesh, even when the best care is given. The small insects may give more trouble than the larger, being more numerous. Horses should be protected with nets whenever possible, and the pens and stalls should be kept clean. The hog pen is a fruitful source of insects, and should be well littered with dry dirt to absorb all liquids.
